

Team Reflection - Week 6

Team Abacus

25 October 2021

1. Customer value & scope

This was an easy sprint as we only had to finish the last things so that the app looked better and fix some bugs. We mostly focused on the statistics tab and changed the color of the bars, made that the y value had 0 as the lowest value, changed the theme color, fixed some bugs and fixed it so that the UI looked better. We also decided for the low and high values for Nox based on earlier values, as we couldn't find any limits when searching for it.

KPIs: This week we completed 2 points total, we have 0 points remaining in this week's To-Do's, and we moved two User Stories to the Done Backlog.

2. Social contract and effort

As the team is entering the examination week and everyone is looking to get free time to study, after finishing the final app in time for Wednesday's presentation, and also since the usual Friday meeting would collide with an exam for Erik, the team decided to push the Friday meeting until Monday to free up time for studying for the rest of the week.

So, this week focused on finalizing the working app for its final form for the presentation on Wednesday, and prioritized studying for exams. It became difficult to size up the shirt sizes on certain To-Dos (namely "prepare for presentation on Wednesday", which ended up having no shirt size at all) and the workload was lower than previous weeks when we had taken on more work to compensate.

3.Design decisions and product structure

In preparation for the presentation of the app we felt like there was a need for a color theme decision to be made. The app UI was previously purple-ish and did not fit with the light blue logo so we changed the theme to work with the logo. There was also some tweaking done to the statistic fragment UI: centering buttons, resizing objects etc.

We have also gone over the code and made sure the relevant classes and functions have comments to ensure code quality.

4.Application of Scrum

Erik was the scrum master this week, Johnny was the product owner and Kevin was the secretary.

We were able to finish all that was planned this week (except one minor task) and had our presentation on wednesday. We decided to skip the meeting on friday since we were having our exam on saturday the same week, and moved it to the next monday instead.

We worked together in groups to finish the last alterations before wednesday and talked openly about problems to get help when someone got stuck.